1.0 Definition

A grievance may be defined as: concerns, problems or complaints raised by an employee about their work, working conditions or relationships with colleagues. The grievance may relate to harassment, bullying and/or victimisation.

Type of Grievance	Description
Harassment	Unwanted behaviour, practice or conduct which cause an individual to feel uncomfortable, distressed, stressed, alarmed, humiliated or frightened or affects their dignity or confidence.
Bullying	Extreme form of harassment and will often involve persistent, maybe deliberate, harm, intimidation or humiliation. Bullying is often, although not always, related to the misuse or abuse of power or position.
Victimisation	When a person is treated less favourably than another person because they have made, or supported, a complaint of harassment, bullying or discrimination.

2.0 Application

The procedure does not apply in the following situations:

- In relation to issues which are outside the responsibility or control of the Governing Body in its role as an employer e.g. income tax, application of the pension scheme, national security.
- To appeals against selection for redundancy – these should be dealt with through the Redundancy Procedure – although re-deployed employees may raise a grievance.
- To appeals against salary/pay/grading - these should be dealt with through the Pay Policy.
- To grievances concerning Health, Safety or Welfare – these should be dealt with by the Health and Safety Co-ordinator in the first instance. Where there is a failure to resolve the matter, however, then such grievances can be considered under this procedure.
- To Governing Body policy.
- To protected disclosures within the Public Interest Disclosure Act 1998.
- To complaints of discrimination from applicants for positions. Such matters will be dealt with through the Complaints Procedure.

3.0 Disciplinary and Capability

An employee may raise a grievance in the course a disciplinary or capability procedure, related to the case.

In such cases, where the written grievance is submitted prior to the appeal hearing, the grievance will normally be dealt with as part of the formal disciplinary/capability process. The onus is on the manager to ensure that the matters raised in the grievance are appropriately dealt with through the disciplinary/capability procedure and that any decision is fair and free of discrimination.

Conversely, it is possible for a grievance to lead to disciplinary proceedings, if matters arise during the course of the hearing which warrant such action.

4.0 Procedure

4.1 Informal Procedure

Grievances are best resolved informally and the Academy expects employees to exhaust this process before entering into the formal procedure.

The informal procedure involves the following:

- An employee arranging to discuss their concerns with the other employee directly. If an employee feels anxious about this process, they might seek support from their union, a friend or colleague.
- A manager mediating or facilitating discussions between the two parties.

4.2 Formal Procedure

4.2.1 Written Grievance

If the conduct which gave rise to the grievance continues after the informal procedure, or the matter could not be resolved through informal procedure, employees should raise the matter formally.

A grievance should be raised with an appropriate manager as follows:

- Where a grievance is against a colleague who is not the employee's line manager – the line manager.
- Where the grievance is against the employee's manager – a more senior manager.
- Where the grievance is against a Principal – the Chair of Governors or a Governor nominated specifically for this purpose.
- Where the grievance is against a Governor, the procedure should be managed by a nominated Governor.

An employee may raise a grievance verbally or in writing, although in law, a formal grievance must be in writing and must explicitly state that it is a grievance.

In the written submission, the employee should:

- Be clear that they are raising a grievance.
- Provide concise and factual information about the nature of their grievance.
- Avoid language which may be considered insulting, provocative or abusive.
- Indicate the redress they seek.

On receiving a written grievance, the manager will make such enquiries as are necessary to gather relevant information to reasonably consider the grievance. This may involve discussion with witnesses, and normally, the person(s) identified in the grievance. Any such discussions will not be in the context of a formal meeting. Consideration will be given to accepting any request for these employees to be accompanied by a friend or trade union representative at any such meeting.

Any relevant information gathered during this enquiry stage will be considered at any formal grievance meeting.

Where appropriate, and where both parties agree, a joint discussion with all parties may take place at this stage with a view to resolving the grievance before it is escalated to a formal meeting.

4.22 Formal Meeting

Where this is not possible, on conclusion of the investigation, the manager will invite the employee to at least one formal meeting at a reasonable time and place at which the grievance can be discussed.

At least 5 working days' notice will be given of the meeting. The employee has the right to be accompanied at this meeting by a representative, friend or colleague and must make their own arrangements for this.

Such representatives should make themselves available to accompany the employee concerned within a reasonable period of time. If, however, the employee's chosen companion is not available, for a reason that was not reasonably unforeseeable, at the time proposed for any meeting or hearing, one alternative date will be set, normally no later than 5 working days from the original date.

The person(s) identified in the grievance may be asked to attend, together with appropriate representation. Witnesses may also be asked to attend.

The purpose of the meeting is for the employee to set out the basis of their grievance and the remedy they are seeking and for the manager to formally consider and respond to these matters.

The manager may adjourn the meeting for the minimum period necessary, to allow further investigation and to seek further information.

The decision of the manager, and the reasons for it, will be confirmed in writing to the person raising the grievance and the person whom the grievance is raised against, within 5 working days of the meeting. The employee will be informed of their right of appeal.

4.23 Outcomes

Clearly, the desired outcome is that the behaviour or conduct which led to the grievance, ceases; however, whatever stage the procedure reaches, and without presupposing the outcome of any formal proceedings, there may be a range of possible remedies where a complaint is upheld, including:

- Formal apology.
- Training.
- Mediation.
- Occupation Health Support.
- Counselling.
- Changes to work methods/styles.
- Redeployment within the Academy.
- Formal disciplinary action against the perpetrator.

Employees raising a grievance should be aware that where their grievance is upheld, confidentiality laws associated with an employee's personnel file, may mean that they are not given details about any action taken, particularly with regard to the other employee.

3.24 Appeal Stage

If the employee wishes to appeal they must confirm this intention in writing to the Chair of Governors within 5 working days of receipt of the written notification of the outcome of the formal meeting, clearly stating the grounds upon which the appeal is made.

The appellant will be given at least 5 working days' notice of the appeal meeting in writing. The employee should take all reasonable steps to attend this meeting and again has the right to be accompanied. If, however, the employee's chosen companion is not available, for a reason that was not reasonably unforeseeable, at the time proposed for any meeting or hearing, one alternative date will be set, normally no later than 5 working days from the original date.

The Governors' Appeal Panel will be provided with minutes of the original meeting and any relevant papers/information gathered by the manager who dealt with the formal stage and the outcome.

The person(s) identified in the grievance may be asked to attend, together with appropriate representation. Witnesses may also be asked to attend.

The Chair of the Governors' Appeal Panel will advise the employee, in writing, of the outcome of the appeal as soon as possible and in any event within 5 working days of the hearing.

There is no further internal appeal after the Governors' Appeal Panel has reached and notified a decision.

4.25 Withdrawal of a Grievance

If an employee withdraws their grievance at any stage of the formal procedure, the reasons will be clarified and fully recorded.

An overview of the whole procedure is provided in Appendix 1.
